THE REVOLUTION. -In the House of Representatives, recently, Mr. Brooks, of New York, denounced with great warmth the conduct of the revolutionists in and out of Congress. The following passage from his speech gives us his view of the present and future of the country :

"He would say to the gentleman from Ohio Mr. Spaulding, | who stood here as a Girond against the Jacobins, that the history of the Girondists was in this place to be written; and although such men as he attempt to arrest the revolution, he [Mr. Brooks] did not think the revolution was here to stop. He did not beunless all history was at fault. We are now repeating the history of Augustus and Julius Casar, and the Government is passing from a republic to a despotism. Revolutions never stop. The Girondists, the conservatives, are to be overwhelmed by the Jacobins; and when we shall have lost all our liberties, some future Napoleon, yet unknown, will rise up from the chaos and rescue the country from anarchy through a military despotism. Hence the resistance of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Miller,] territory of the old Republic was already under a military despotism, and there was no more protection in the Southern States for life, liberty, or property than under the dominions of the Sultan or the Czar. The military govwhite and black, was to be extended over the North and West before the revolution was finished. While he greeted the voice of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. Spaulding,] and welcomed the calmly resisting tones of the gen-tleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Miller,] he Extract—teste. W. B. GOODING, Clerk. knew if history were correct, there was to be no escape for any of us. The gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. Butler, ] in his specifications of impeachment, said that this House would be false to itself if it sbrank from impeachment now. The gentleman was right .-The ball of revolution which had been set in motion was not to be stopped, but was to roll ever the House and the country. They who embark in revolution can never shrink. They

In 1863, Mr. Hawley D. Clapp, of New York, orous than elegant expressions of the Tribune, "Mr. Clapp was suddenly jerked up and flung into Fort Lafayette, where he was kept several months without trial or investigation. At length he was thrust out; and, being still under prosecution, he, instead of giving bail, deposited the amount required in the Mechanics' and Clerks' Savings Bank; commencing a suit therefor, in order to bring the main question to issue as promptly and squarely as might be.' Mr. Clapp has just been acquitted, and the authority which pronounces him innocent concluded his judgment as follows:

ransom himself from an unjust imprisonment. "H. W. ROBINSON."

Thus, after four years imprisonment, obloquy, calumny and outrage, a citizen is informed that he may take the money which he deposited as a guarantee of of his innocence; that he was unjustly incarcerated, and may hold up his head among honest men. And the amiable

Jacobin of the Tribune pathetically adds: "Whoever has reproached or condemned ceedings to which he has been subjected in the to keep a larger assortment of premises, must now consider him fully vindi-
